
Arts

The New York Times

Friday, July 13, 2007

THE CHILDREN'S THEATER COMPANY- In New York you're never too little for the stage, and this company welcomes thespians as young as 4 or 5, as well as those much older. Its Spring-Summer Showcase is a round of short musicals, with the youngest actors performing an adaptation of the children's book "Miss Spider's Tea Party." Older members' offerings will include an acrobatically enhanced "King Kunka Bunka and the Rotten Royal Rascals," about a widowed monarch's search for an heir- an intriguingly original musical in rap with rousing Russian-style music and dance; and a salsa-fied world premiere of "Horton the Elephant," a musical interpretation loosely based on Dr. Seuss's story of a selfish bird and that loyal elephant who's "faithful 100 percent." The Children's Theatre Company is exactly what it sounds like. Actors, some as young as 4, perform in short musicals, including an adaptation of the book "Miss Spider's Tea Party"; a show called "King Kunka Bunka and His Rotten Royal Rascals,". Is this town big enough for two Dr. Seuss musicals? Probably. Performances are on weekends at 4:30 p.m. at the Baha'i Unity Center, 53 East 11th Street, Greenwich Village. $12 Reservations required: (212) 633-6629.

"...an acrobatically enhanced King Kunka Bunka and the Rotten Royal Rascals ...an intriguingly original musical in rap with rousing Russian-style music and dance...and a salsa-fied... "Horton the Elephant..."